Rethinking Brand

From disruptor to defender, one of the early on delivery players is looking to redefine the brand

SNEHA BHATTACHARIE
New Delhi, 11 June

Once the poster boy for young entrepreneurial talent and feted for his sharp putdowns of fellow start-ups on social media, Zomato founder Deepinder Goyal has cast himself in a new role: that of a new-age employer. Having announced a 26-week paternity leave for all his employees, Goyal has been flooded with congratulatory messages and laudatory references for his sensitive leadership, with some flak too, for turning a best practice into a marketing gimmick. But leave the chatter aside and Goyal's latest move reveals an astute brandmeister.

Thanks to Goyal, Zomato is in the news, not for the efficiency of its delivery platform or discovery features that its rivals are being judged on, but as an ideal employer. Some months ago, it was about its sustainability/initiatives and special subscription offers. In a cluttered market, Zomato is building a wider and more differentiated space for itself, stepping away from its positioning as a challenger brand into one defending its turf, said experts.

"We have become more transparent in the way we communicate with users, as a service provider, and with other stakeholders, as a brand"

GAURAV GUPTA
COO & co-founder, Zomato

Zomato must consistently mean the same to all its constituencies, even if we use different tech stacks or services, he adds.

"It's start as the restaurant discovery service rated by customers automatically gave it street-cred. Its graduation into a food delivery app was a logical carry forward of the equity. And then Zomato Gold and its freebies dove-tailed into what has changed Zomato in the last with the brand. Gupta says the challenge is to offer a homogenous but customised experience to all.

Zomato is currently leading food delivery across 250 cities, brands calling it longer just deeper working towards the quality of food to mediating the supply providing restaurant to fresh, clean, fully food ingredients. We biodegradable and
